Dracula

With DCCC Professor of English,
 Dr. Nina Benhardus

Tuesday, Feb. 24 — 6:30 PM

Bram Stoker might not have invented the vampire, but his novel Dracula certainly has played a major role shaping our modern imagination. In this talk, Dr. Nina Benhardus, an Assistant Professor of English at Delaware County Community College, will consider both what it means to be a vampire within the world of Dracula and what real-world, Victorian anxieties Dracula represents. We will also explore how Dracula is still relevant and influential in the 21st century.
